Force Structure realignment inactivates ABCCC

By Staff Sgt. Chris Stagner
355th Wing Public Affairs

The sun is setting in the Arizona sky on the largest squadron in the 355th Wing's Operations Group.

The Department of Defense's Fiscal Year 2003 Force Structure plan to retire the Airborne Battlefield Command and Control Center fleet has led to the inactivation of the 42nd Airborne Command and Control Squadron.

Three different platforms, the E-3A, Airborne Warning and Control System aircraft; E-8C, Joint Surveillance Target Attack Radar System aircraft; and air control units using satellite communications, will pick up the mission left behind by the ABCCC.

"The ABCCC has been involved in every conflict since Vietnam," said Lt. Col. Norman Potter, commander of the 42nd ACCS since December 2000.

"The ABCCC was in Vietnam, Panama, Haiti, Desert Storm and Desert Shield, the Balkans, Bosnia and others," he added. "It flew every day for seven years in Vietnam. It's kind of sad to see it go."

"People were anxious to learn what was happening until the Airstaff decision was released. Members of the 42nd ACCS are ok with closing the squadron and doing a good job by starting anew," said Potter.

There are 375 personnel assigned to the 42nd ACCS and all will be affected differently by the closure. "A few of the 42nd ACCS members will stay at D-M if their Air Force Specialty Codes allow," said Potter. "We're not moving people we don't have to," he added.

The 42nd ACCS, however, isn't the only

D-M asset affected by the Fiscal 2003 Structure program. The Aerospace Maintenance and Regeneration Center is to lose 12 civilian personnel due to workload adjustments, while the 355th Contracting Squadron will lose eight military personnel due to workload changes.

While the loss of D-M members affected by the Fiscal 2003 Structure program is saddening, it is only temporary. D-M has been slated to convert six OA-10 aircraft to A-10 aircraft. This move will increase 16 military authorizations here.

That's only part of what's expected to happen here. Pending the successful completion of an environmental assessment, D-M is scheduled to gain a new Combat Search and Rescue unit. If D-M receives the new unit, it will bring in several HC-130 aircraft and HH-60 helicopters that will also increase D-M's assigned personnel by more than 500 people.

D-M puts motorcycle safety first

By 2nd Lt. Sharon F. Ehasz
355th Wing Public Affairs

Since the beginning of Fiscal Year 2001, the Air Force has lost 17 airmen to fatal motorcycle accidents, three of whom were killed within the 101 Critical Days of Summer, including one D-M assigned airman.

"These numbers show how important it is to make yourself seen and to ride defensively," said Master Sgt. Matt Pederson, Ground Safety superintendent.

With some instructions differing between Air Force and other military bases, motorcycle riders must review the individual base's supplements to ensure compliance.

As written in the Air Force Instruction 91-207 Davis-Monthan Supplement, Section C: "All motorcycle, motor scooter and moped operations on D-M and for operations by military personnel off base include wearing of a vest or jacket. At night, the vest or jacket will have a minimum of 24 square inches of reflectorized material attached, clearly visible from the rear, not covered."

In conjunction with the above instruction, AFI 31-204, D-M

Supplement, further explains daytime clothing as being a "brightly colored or contrasting vest or jacket as an outer garment."

"Brightly colored or contrasting means a color that contrasts with what you are wearing and with the surrounding environment," said Michael Barnes, 355th Wing Ground Safety manager. AFI31-204, D-M Supplement, is the instruction 355th Security Forces Squadron members use with regard to motor vehicle traffic. Specifically, Section 4.2.14 covers the operations of motorcycles. A summary of proper safety wear includes:

Supporting each other and working together to provide the best programs and services is a goal for all D-M people.

Ideas, suggestions, comments, concerns and kudos are important to make improvements.

The best way to pass along a comment or to get an answer to a concern is to contact the agency chief or functional managers listed here. Still no solution? The Commander's Corner phone line is 228-4747.

An e-mail can also be sent to: 355thWingCommandersCorner@dm.af.mil.

Callers must leave their name, phone number and a message. They will receive a prompt reply in writing or by telephone. We will honor caller confidentiality, but sometimes we need to contact callers to gather additional information. If a concern is of general interest to the base populace, the response may be published in the Desert Airman. Anonymous calls may not be published.

Service for Freedom

Davis-Monthan officials expect thousands of eyes to look to the Tucson skies April 27-28 for Aerospace & Arizona Days 2002.

The two-day airshow will feature numerous military and civilian aerial demonstrations and one of the largest displays of static aircraft from across the United States.

This year's feature demonstration will be a Combat Search and Rescue pickup accomplished by the 305th Rescue Squadron and 355th A/OA-10 aircraft. Several demonstration and static display aircraft from the Air Force, Navy, Army and Marines are expected.

"This year's airshow is exciting for new reasons," said Lt. Col. Rick "Goobs" Blackburn, A&A Days 2002 director. "This is the first time since Sept. 11 that the base has been able to open up its gates to the community."

The show is centered on the theme of Service for Freedom and focuses not only on the military service required for freedom but the local community service. This freedom gives the community the opportunity to shake hands with local police, fire department, military and many others that live a life to ensure our great freedoms. D-M is excited to have the public out for a great day of entertainment and fun, both on the ground and in the air. Although the schedule is not complete, attractions that can be expected are B-1, B-52, KC-135, F-16, F-18, A-10, Apache, AV-8, EC-130, F-4, P-51, B-17 and multiple civilian aerobatic aircraft.

The 42nd ACCS recently held their open house to give members a chance to show friends and family members what they do and where they work.

The 42nd ACCS is an integral part of Air Combat Command's theater air control system. The squadron's seven unique EC-130E Hercules aircraft have been modified to carry the Airborne Battlefield Command and Control Center III Capsule, which houses a 15-person battlestaff.

The battlestaff includes operations, intelligence and communications people.

In order to operate a motorcycle on a military installation, it is mandatory to complete a Motorcycle Safety Foundation approved training course.

The beginner's Riding and Street Skills Course costs $170 and the Experienced Rider Course costs $80. For military members, these courses are paid for with unit funds.

In addition to better riding skills, the course may decrease motorcycle insurance by as much as 15 percent.

The Riding and Street Skills Course includes a driving test that replaces the one given by the Department of Motor Vehicles.

Nine aircraft, 130 ground crew, and 35 officers are at D-M from Lossiemouth, Scotland for air - to - ground weapons employment and Dissimilar Aircraft Combat Training.

Members of the Royal Air Force, the Tornados typically spend between two and three weeks in the United States for weapons training.

"Coming to D-M gives the British fighter pilots a chance to see some of the best varieties of targets in the world," said Col. Lee Wilper, Commander of the 162nd Fighter Wing's Snowbird Ops Detachment. "The Barry M. Goldwater Range Complex that the Tornados are using while at D-M is well known because of its tactical and controlled ranges, supersonic - approved airspace as well as its size."

In route to the complex, the Tornados also have an opportunity to train on low-level routes through a wide variety of terrain features, something that they do not have in Great Britain.

"As an added bonus, the 355th Wing is providing Forward Air Controllers for close-air support missions while the 162nd is providing adversary support to oppose interdiction missions as well as imbedding with the Tornados on strike missions," said Wilper.

U.S. and British aircraft have flown thousands of sorties together including coalition operations in Desert Storm in 1991. Participating in joint training provides pilots insight on various procedures used by each force. That information helps pilots anticipate each other's moves and prepare for challenges that may occur during coalition operations.

"We work with American pilots and air traffic controllers a great deal," said Royal Air Force Squadron Leader Jock Cochrane. "We have a lot of young fighters and coming here not only provides us the opportunity to train in good weather and on great ranges, but a chance to learn various terms and procedures as well."

Number 617 Squadron, known as the Dambusters, is flying training missions here until April 5th. The Dambusters are one of the most famous Royal Air Force Squadrons because of operations they flew in World War II that involved the destruction of dams that were vital to the German war effort.

Number 14 Squadron will replace the Dambusters on April 5th and will be training until April 19th.

"We are already making plans to bring the Tornados back in the fall," said Wilper

GR-4s are significantly louder than D-M's home-based A/OA-10s and EC-130s. The all-weather fighter bomber will be flying in the Tucson area until April 19.

Airmen receive swift justice

Article 15 Overview continued from 22 March issue

◆ A SrA received reduction to Airman 1st Class and 30 days extra duty for disobeying a lawful order, making a false official statement, failing to pay debts, and soliciting another to commit an offense, violations of Articles 92, 107 and 134 of the UCMJ.

◆ An A1C received suspended reduction to airman, 45 days extra duty, and a reprimand for failing to pay a Government Travel Card bill, a violation of Article 92 of the UCMJ.

◆ An Amn received vacation of a previously suspended reduction to airman basic for using a government calling card for personal use, a violation of Article 92 of the UCMJ.

◆ A SrA received 30 days correctional custody, reduction to airman first class, suspended reduction to airman, and a reprimand for disobeying an NCO, storing ammunition in a dormitory room, and larceny, violations of Articles 91, 92 and 121 of the UCMJ.

◆ An A1C received reduction to airman, suspended reduction to airman basic, restriction to base for 45 days, and 45 days extra duty for underage drinking and assault consummated by battery, violations of Articles 92 and 128 of the UCMJ.

The same offense can result in different punishments for each member. The commander of the offender must consider several factors when determining punishment, such as: offender's service record, previous incidents, seriousness of the offense and impact on unit discipline, cohesion and morale.

AFAF Campaign deadline extended:

The new campaign deadline is April 12. It was extended to ensure sufficient time to make 100 percent contact to include deployed personnel.

OSS Airfield Operations Flight receives glowing reviews: two members earn Best in Air Combat Command distinction

By 2nd Lt. Becky Warren
355th Wing Public Affairs

Recently, the 355th Operation Support Squadron/Operational Support Airlift Airfield Operations Flight comprised of base operations and the control tower, received several glowing comments and impressed the entire Headquarters Air Combat Command inspection team.

Chief of Base Operations Tech. Sgt. Eric Johnson, and Assistant Airfield Manager Alberto Smith earned Best in ACC recognition.

Both Johnson and Smith are competing for awards on the Air Force level. Within the Operations Group, Johnson was named the Non-Commissioned Officer of the Year and Smith was the Intermediate Civilian Supervisor of the Year.

"Our biggest stars during the inspection were Chief of the Control Tower Master Sgt. Gregory Harrel, Airfield Manager Edward Leuty, Mr. Smith, and Sgt. Johnson," said Airfield Operations Flight Commander Maj. Richard Harrington. "Of course, the whole team helped win accolades."

The inspection that Air Traffic Control went through is their equivalent of an Operational Readiness Inspection.

The evaluation was done to provide an assessment of the quality, adequacy, and safety of the air traffic system supporting flying operations at Davis-Monthan.

The review determined that the "Airfield Operation Flight is providing exceptional air traffic control and airfield management services to the wing. The flight is composed of highly professional and dedicated individuals who work as a team to get the job done," as written in the ACC evaluation.

According to the report from Headquarters ACC, the Air Traffic Control and Landing Systems, as well as the 355th Civil Engineer Squadron provide excellent support to airfield

Common Sense Parenting®

New Book Brings Help and Confidence to Parents of Toddlers

HELP • HEALING • HOPE

Confidence. Less conflict. Enjoyment.

That's what author Bridget Barnes believes parents who use the techniques and skills explained in the new book, Common Sense Parenting of Toddlers and Preschoolers, can gain. Those skills have been taught to parents of 2 to 5 year-olds in workshops offered by Girls and Boys Town since 1996 and are now available to any parent through the book just published by Boys Town Press.

When a parent realizes that "I can correct my child, he or she may get upset with me, but the child is still going to love me," the parent gains confidence, according to Barnes. The book shows parents how to stay calm, communicate clearly, set boundaries, have reasonable expectations, give consistent consequences, and teach a young child self-control and other skills.

Parenting toddlers can be a time of high conflict. Many couples are just finding out that they have very different parenting styles — one may see the other as either too lenient or too strict, says Barnes. It may not be an exaggeration, she adds, to say that agreeing to use Common Sense Parenting® techniques "saves marriages. It can lead to a lot less strife."

Parents, according to Barnes, list many of the same problems with their toddlers — acting up at bedtime and meals, throwing temper tantrums, refusing to take "no" for an answer, etc. In dealing with these issues, however, parents also make common mistakes — treating children like "little adults," giving kids choices they're not equipped to make, and setting expectations too high.

Young children, she says, need lots of reminders, assistance, modeling, and patience. The book provides step-by-step information on how to do these things. Also included are answers to dozens of questions frequently asked by parents of toddlers.

Barnes is the mother of two and stepmother of four children and has been a Common Sense Parenting trainer for 13 years.

Common Sense Parenting of Toddlers and Preschoolers is available from the Boys Town Press, 14100 Crawford St., Boys Town, NE 68010, 1-800-282-6657, www.girlsandboystown.org/btpres

Take care of your family; poison proof your home

By Stephanie Ritter
355th Wing Public Affairs

Approximately every 30 seconds, a child is poisoned in the United States. The 355th Medical Support Squadron Pharmacy has prevention techniques that save lives.

"We try our best to make sure that younger parents know how to safeguard their homes," said Senior Master Sgt. Michael Hodge, 355th Medical Support Squadron Pharmacy superintendent. "If nothing else, they need to have the number for the Poison Control Center posted in a clear place in case an accident does occur."

"The best way to check a home and make it safe is to go where the children go by getting down on their level and crawling around. I've actually done this with my own children and it is amazing how many dangerous items are taken for granted, like bathroom cleaning supplies. I learned to either put child locks on cupboards or to move items out of reach," said Hodge.

The most prevalent causes of poisonings usually involves prescription and over-the-counter medications, household and chemical products, plants and cosmetics. In addition to keeping all hazardous items out of reach, discard items no longer needed according to the manufacturer's instructions.

"People that have any questions about how to discard items that are no longer used should call the pharmacy at 228-2850," Hodge said.

If possible, avoid products such as cough syrup or mouthwashes that contain alcohol. These are hazardous for children.

A child-resistant cap is not necessarily child-proof and should be guarded carefully. It is easy to overlook prescription medications that visiting family or friends may bring into the home. It is also important never to refer to medicine or vitamins as "candy".

D-M members with small children can obtain a bottle of Ipecac Syrup, a product that induces vomiting, by prescription from the D-M or local pharmacy. "Providers are usually more than willing to write a prescription for Ipecac because it is such an important home product," said Hodge. Ipecac should only be used upon recommendation from the poison control center.

The numbers for the local Poison Control Center are 1-800-362-0101 or 626-6016. Also the National Poison Control Center can be reached at 1-800-222-1222.

Straighten priorities, take care of self, mission

By Lt Col. Mark Hobson
355th Contracting Squadron

What are your priorities in life? What do you decide is important enough to make time for in your busy schedule?

I had the opportunity as a young lieutenant to hear a briefing by then-Air Force Inspector General Lt. Gen. Robert Springer, wherein he talked about priorities.

His briefing has stuck with me throughout my career. I want to share his philosophy because it makes a lot of sense to me both 17 years ago and today.

Lt Gen. Springer began his pitch by identifying three priorities he felt we should all have.

First in his order of importance was your physical and spiritual fitness. Second was family, and mission came in third.

Now I know this may sound like heresy to say mission is third, but let me explain. The general knew full well that when it came down to root, hog or die, we are all ready to stand up and do whatever is needed to get the mission done regardless of the costs to our lives. His philosophy was directed at our day-to-day routine lives as a general guideline.

His first priority was your physical and spiritual fitness. The premise is that you have to take care of yourself in order to take care of others and the mission. Time spent to keep yourself strong both inside and out is time well spent.

How many of us easily find the excuse that we just don't have time to get to the gym or take that run or bike ride in the evening. You have to make the time to keep yourself strong and complete.

What happens if you deploy and you do not have the physical and moral strength to get the mission done? Someone else has to step into the breach to take up your slack.

If lunchtime gets too busy, get up early and head to the gym. If mornings do not work, go at lunch or after work. There is no excuse for neglecting yourself. You have to put in the time to keep yourself strong.

His second priority was to take care of your family. If you neglect the time it takes to keep your family relationships healthy, how well will you be able to take care of the mission?

Now I know we all work hard and it is difficult to get away for events like your son or daughter's ball game in the evening, but make every effort to do so. Carve time out for your family at every opportunity. Avoid the trap of assuming that if you don't work late every evening, the organization is going to fall apart. If your family is taken care of, you will be able to devote your full attention to the mission.

Lt Gen. Springer's final priority was the mission. He fully believed that if you have taken care of yourself and your family, you were fully prepared to achieve mission accomplishment regardless of the challenges.

We are asked to do some pretty tough jobs in our Air Force careers. Trying to do these jobs with the distractions of poor health and failing families can be near impossible.

View your personal fitness and family health as the path to focus fully on mission accomplishment when the time comes. The phrase "people are our most valuable asset" fully applies to today's Air Force. Strong people with strong families will execute the mission every time.

May God bless America.

Proud members of 355th EMS Ammo stand by a 355th Fighter Wing F-105 of the Vietnam era.

If you ain't Ammo, you ain't ...

Story and photos by 2nd Lt. Sharon F. Ehasz
355th Wing Public Affairs

"Ammo makes the mission, without Ammo, the Air Force is just another unscheduled airline," said Senior Master Sgt. Ron Orr, Munitions Flight chief.

Storage is responsible for 21 igloos. Each igloo is made of reinforced concrete with a minimum of two feet of earth on all sides except the entrance.

As important as the 168 person 355th Munitions Flight is to D-M, Ammo is often "the forgotten flight," said Tech. Sgt. Jody York, Munitions crew chief.

After all, Ammo country, all 164 square acres, is off in a world of its own. To get there, one must drive on Yuma Street past the turn off for the base hospital, past the Recycling Center, past the 41st and 43rd Electronic Combat Squadrons, past the Security Forces' dog kennels, past Roadrunner City and past the Aircraft Maintenance and Regeneration Center.

All but one of the 13 elements within Ammo work out in Ammo country. Each element plays a distinctly different role, but each is necessary for the end result of munitions being available for D-M users.

Munitions Operations orders, tracks and ships all munitions for the base. Last year, 736,310 rounds of target practice 30 millimeter munitions were used. This equates to about $13 million. The above numbers represent one account of the 46 different accounts Munitions Operations handles. But Ammo does not just expend money; they recycle the brass from their used munitions. Last year, the recycled brass returned $156,000 to Munitions Operations' War Reserve Munitions account.

"Combat Ammunition System Base is multi-level. We track munitions for the flight. We handle daily work orders, personnel and equipment," said Senior Airman Kevin Krause, CAS-B System Security officer. In addition, the CAS-B computer system is the host server for three other satellites.

"Control tracks everything that happens in the munitions community. Nothing happens without Control knowing about it," said Tech. Sgt. Joey Valenzuela, Control assistant superintendent. Essentially, if the flightline needs any munitions, Control makes sure they gets there.

Conventional Maintenance handles "chaff, flares, 30mm, practice and general

"I love it here. The job is so different that we are a lot closer...more of a family," said 1st Lt. Andre Lecours, Munitions Flight commander. (above)

Airman 1st Class Melissa Gonzalez, Munitions Handling crewmember, prepares to deliver live munitions from the holding area to the flightline.

Conventional Maintenance's Staff Sgt. Bryan Kelley (left), Airman 1st Class Michael France and Senior Airman Kevin Hunter (right) process downloaded 30 millimeter Training Practice casings that have returned from the flightline after a mission.

Staff Sgt. Don Reid, Conventional Maintenance crew chief, stuffs chaff for the A/OA-10. Chaff is made of metallic chards and is designed to redirect a radar-seeking missile from an enemy aircraft.

Airmen 1st Class Rory Lapres (left) and Matt Lindstrom, Munition Systems crewmembers, connect the Air Intercept Missile-9 Sidewinder missile body with its $24,000 heat-seeking guidance system.

Tech. Sgt. Steve Lewis, Idaho Air National Guard, prepares live bombs to be moved off the building pad. The Boise, Idaho ANG unit is at D-M for training with Operation Snowbird. "We would like to thank D-M Ammo for their help. We couldn't ask for better," said Tech. Sgt. Mark Page, Idaho ANG.

Staff Sgt. Robert Carr, Munitions crewmember, puts a set fuse into a 500-pound bomb. These bombs were being assembled for the 357th Fighter Squadron for their final training drops.

purpose bombs, rockets, basically all but the missile shop, to include building the munitions," said Master Sgt. Jason McMains, Conventional Maintenance superintendent. "The bomb build pad is the only spot we build our live high explosive 500 pound bombs, 2000 pound bombs, cluster bombs and high explosive rockets," said Tech. Sgt. Jon Anderson, Munitions crew chief.

Precision Guided Munitions checks Sidewinder AIM-9s and Maverick Air-to-Ground Missile-65s on a regular basis for upkeep. With the changing of warfare, PGM is becoming more important. "The branches of the military are all going precision guided. One missile costs a lot of money, but 90 percent get their target. They're much more efficient," said Master Sgt. Greg Rempfer, PGM Maintenance superintendent.

Munitions Handling Operations, or Line Delivery, "is the face of the bomb dump. We're the last Quality Assurance before Ammo turns over munitions," said Master Sgt. Robert Townsend, Munitions Handling superintendent. "Handling is the forward foot in day to day operations. They deal with flightline and people rather than being out at Ammo," said 2nd Lt. Matt Larson, Munitions Flight assistant flight commander.

Other aspects of Ammo include Storage, Inspection, Trailer Maintenance, Mobility and Training.

As diverse as their elements, Ammo troops are able to work within any of the 13 elements, whether it's building bombs, storage or maintenance on munitions. "We are experts even though we are diverse," said Townsend.

So now we know why they say, "if you ain't Ammo, you ain't...."

Conventional Maintenance's Staff Sgts. Steve Coraizzini and Peter Moreno move the bodies of MK-82 500 pound bombs from the storage rack onto the Munitions Assembly Conveyor.

Amanda Falk shows the form that earned her a berth in a regional tournament, with a shot at a national tournament that could net her a $25,000 scholarship..

Youth bowler shines in competition

Staff Sgt. Chris Stagner
355th Wing Public Affairs

Bowling balls fly down the lane. Some pins tumble, some pins don't. The sounds of laughter and the general roar of 100 different conversations fills the air with a sense of happiness and pleasure.

At the Davis-Monthan Bowling Center, the Young American Bowling Alliance is thriving.

YABA is an organization designed to promote young bowlers and recognize them for their accomplishments, said Steve Willis, assistant manager of the bowling center, and a YABA coach.

Within the YABA League here is 15-year-old Amanda Falk, the daughter of Karen and Staff Sgt. Charles Falk, a munitions handling crew chief in the 355th Equipment Maintenance Squadron.

It all started for Amanda nine years ago while the family was stationed at Eielson Air Force Base, Alaska.

"It was a good activity during the winter," said Karen. "It's a good program for the kids."

Amanda picked up the game naturally and is self-taught, said Charles.

With an average of 162, the 15 year old bowled in the city tournament recently and averaged a score of 205 through four games. The 820 series earned her the opportunity to compete in a regional Coca-Cola sponsored championship Saturday at Brunswick Camino Seco Bowl.

If Amanda wins at the regional tournament, she will then go on an all-expenses-paid trip to Florida to compete against other bowlers in the nationals for a $25,000 scholarship.

Amanda hopes to go to college on a bowling scholarship ... "preferably at a school with a good football team," she said with a smile.

Helping Kids Succeed in School

Girls and Boys Town

There are several things parents can do to improve their children's school behavior and academic performance.

- Make sure your child follows instructions.
- Get involved in your children's education.
- Have your child show or tell you about specific things that happened at school.
- Set up time for homework. Help if needed.
- No homework? Have children read aloud to siblings, write letters, help others with homework—anything that continues learning.
- Stay in contact with teachers.
- Work with teachers to solve school problems.

Aerospace & Arizona Days 2002

Davis-Monthan AFB • April 27 - 28, 2002

"Service For Freedom"

D-M officials expect thousands of eyes to look to the Tucson skies April 27-28 for Aerospace & Arizona Days 2002.

The two-day airshow will feature numerous military and civilian aerial demonstrations and one of the largest displays of static aircraft from across the United States. This year's feature demonstration will be a Combat Search and Rescue pickup accomplished by our very own A/OA-10 aircraft and the 305th Rescue Squadron rescue helicopters. Several demonstration aircraft from the Air Force, Navy, Army, and Marines are expected.

Air Show Program

As a business owner, you can show your support and reach out to a very large captive audience by placing your ad in the air show program.

This special edition will be inserted into the Desert Airman, official base newspaper for Davis-Monthan AFB. It will also be available in high traffic locations in Tucson prior to the show, and made available to the public attending the two-day event.
